Be visionary

Pioneer new services and methods, always willing to be innovative in order to release captives and affect change in our community. We recognize visionary efforts fail, but we are determined to fail by doing rather than not doing.

Do a lot with a little

We work collaboratively and strategically to maximize any resources we steward.

Communicate with integrity

We are committed to truthful, accurate, timely and relevant communication. We believe good communication is essential for strong relationships, healthy families and communities, and effective ministry.

We work as a team

We build each other up, give credit where credit is due and rely on each other's insights and expertise

Value the individual

Value each individual. We believe in equal opportunity and justice for all. Created in the image of God, people of all nationalities, ages and functions have distinctive contributions and callings. We are committed to honoring God-given leadership and ministry gifts

Run to the battle

We have an invisible enemy bent on our destruction and the hoped for failure of our ministry. We have to make a daily determination to run to the battle of the day to be a fighter for those in captivity in our community.

Trust God to do “the saving”

We are neither a savior nor The Savior. We trust the Lord knows the pain of each of our clients and the cries of those not rescued yet. We pause in our work frequently to ask Him to fight for our clients and give us wisdom on how to be a part of the battle.

Practice Sabbath

Sabbath is a practical divestment so that neighborly engagement, rather than production (busyness) and consumption, defines our lives.

Divine rest on the seventh day of creation has made clear (a) that Yahweh is not a workaholic, (b) that Yahweh is not anxious about the full functioning of creation, and (c) that the well-being of creation does not depend on endless work.
